WINTER'S MOST BITTER PLUNGE TO REACH OHIO

Zero Temperature Due in These Parts Tonight and Tuesday

GALES, BLIZZARDS ACCOMPANY BLASTS

Snow and Ice Take Many Lives in West and Central West

The winter's most bitter cold rolled deeper over the continent today. Accompanied by gales and blizzards which have left a growing death list and suffering in its wake, the frigid blast was moving in on the central states from the western plains.

Traffic accidents mounted in the west and central west, as the sub zero temperatures came with snow and ice, pushing a ball of fog and mist ahead.

Blanket of Snow
Winter laid a protective blanket of snow over most of Utah and South Idaho before turning on the cold, causing farmers little concern for their crops. Instead, their land much in need of moisture, they greeted the blizzard jubilantly.

Five deaths were blamed on the weather in Iowa. Three were killed in traffic accidents, and two were fatally injured in falls.

The eastern states awaited the arrival of the cold wave today, with predictions of rain turning into snow.

Freezing temperatures prevailed along the west coast, with a new storm sweeping snow and ice in on orchards.

A Sunday rain turned snow to sleet in Pennsylvania, and New York, in the 40's, was drenched with a steady light fall.

Zero Wave On Way

COLUMBUS, Jan. 21.—Weather outlook for the 36-hour period beginning at 8 o'clock last night:

The cold wave is spreading eastward over the Mississippi Valley and Lake Region. Zero temperatures prevail over the upper lakes and near zero as far east as the Indiana-Illinois line.

The further advance of this area will bring a marked change to colder in this vicinity in the next few hours, changing the rain into snow this afternoon followed by much colder weather with snow flurries. There was a temperature range this morning of 98 degrees between North Dakota and southern Florida.

Plasterers At Work

LISBON, Jan. 21.—Four plasterers and four laborers were at work today on the court house annex under the supervision of William Reese of East Liverpool, who last week was awarded the contract for the plastering job on a bid of $149.

FIVE SALEMITES HURT IN CRASH

Anna Solomon in Critical Condition in Rochester Hospital Today

Several Salem persons are in the General hospital at Rochester, Pa., suffering from injuries received in an automobile accident there Sunday while they were enroute home from Woodlawn, near Pittsburgh.

One of the occupants, Mrs. Anna Solomon, 450 Aetna st., is in critical condition as the result of the mishap. Four others were in the car including George Ghislow of South Ellsworth and Nick Meier. Details of the accident were lacking and the names of the other two persons could not be learned. Their injuries, however, were believed to be less serious than those of Mrs. Solomon.

Five persons are in the East Liverpool hospital suffering from injuries received when their automobile was struck by another driven by Rudolph Walberg of Chicago two miles east of Minerva on Route 30 at 1:30 a. m. today. Walberg was taken to a Canton hospital.

The injured persons, all residents of Salineville, were riding in a machine driven by Allen M. Maple, 44, a Salineville butcher, who suffered leg and forehead lacerations. His wife, Mrs. Ruth Maple, received a fractured right ankle and wrist and scalp lacerations.

TRAFFIC TAKES HEAVY TOLL AS FOG HITS OHIO

Highways Hidden in Fog Throughout State Cause Accidents

TWO KILLED, TEN INJURED IN STARK

Autos Crash Into Trees and Poles; Death Toll Mounts

With highways wet and hidden in fog in many parts of the state, traffic accidents became more numerous and the death toll leaped higher late Saturday and yesterday.

In a collision of two automobiles near Dayton, Manvil Sandy, 31, Dayton, was fatally injured at Hamilton, James Arlie Frost, 22, son of Fire Captain Arlie Frost, died of injuries received when an auto in which he was riding skidded and crashed into a pole.

Paul Armstrong, 20, of Versailles, died a few hours after his auto overturned in a ditch on state route 21. Joseph Sells, 26, died in a Toledo hospital after his auto rammed a parked truck near the Ohio-Michigan border.

Frank Sullivan, 22, died at Springfield from injuries received when his auto careened from a highway and hit a tree. Edwin O'Neil, 56, died in Columbus from injuries received when struck by an auto Thursday.

Cleveland's 1935 traffic toll reached 13 with the death of Mrs. Dorothy Rhine, 35, who was injured Wednesday when her auto hit a traffic station. Six persons were injured seriously in accidents yesterday in Cleveland.

Mrs. Ethel G. Schutz, 55, state vice president of the League of Women Voters, was injured fatally near Zanesville Saturday when her auto skidded and overturned.

John Merriam, Baltimore, Md., was killed when a truck plunged from the national highway near Eaton Saturday.

The death of Jack Jones, 25, whose body was almost severed by a street car in Columbus, was being investigated today by Coroner E. E. Smith, after a peculiar wound on the head of the victim led Smith to suspect Jones might have been the victim of foul play.

Two Dead in Stark

CANTON, Jan. 21.—The heavy fog which blanketed the state over the weekend was blamed for the deaths of two persons and serious injury to 10 others in Stark county.

Two Akron residents, Albert Gailley, 26, and Mrs. Mildred Bonifay, 27, met instant death when their automobile skidded at a turn in the fog and crashed into a telephone pole. Mrs. Gailley and Mr. Bonifay, riding in the rear of the same machine, are in a local hospital in a serious condition.

Seven persons, six from Canton and the other from Massillon, were seriously injured when their car crashed headon into a truck on the Canton-Wooster rd near Dalton early today.

Among those seriously hurt was Miss Beatrice Cottle, 19, who was on route with her parents home from Columbus where she had taken part as a semi-finalist in the state Prince of Peace declamation contest. All in this accident are in Massillon City hospital.

Hav. Forage Crops Will Be Discussed

Earl Jones, extension worker in soils and crops from Ohio State university, will discuss the growing of hay and forage crops at a meeting of Columbiana county farmers to be held in the basement of the Methodist church at 8 p. m. on Tuesday.

The discussion will include alfalfa, sweet clover, soybeans, sudan grass, and other crops. Jones is well-known to local farmers and it is expected that a large number will attend.

The meeting has been arranged by County Extension Agent Floyd Lower of Lisbon.

Farm Institute Will Open 4-Day Sessions Wednesday

The annual Salem Independent Farm Institute will open in the Memorial building on Wednesday for a four-day exhibition of programs and contests, closing on Saturday.

Regularly scheduled features at the Memorial building have been canceled from Wednesday to Saturday in preference to the farm gathering.

The program committee has announced that various contests will be held, including one on Friday to determine the best local vocal quartet. In this event any quartet from Salem will be eligible, whether from churches, lodges, clubs or composed of private individuals. Each group, male, female or mixed, will be allotted five minutes for the performances.

Cash prizes will be awarded after decisions by competent judges. It was announced today. A first and second prize will be made.

An old fiddlers' contest will be the feature of the Saturday night bill of fare, for which prizes also will be awarded. It will be purely an old time jamboree. Judges likewise will award prizes in this event. Contestants will be allowed three minutes and may play either with or without accompaniment.

Price Cope, chairman of the program committee, has charge of enrollments and may be reached at phone 1631. After each of the above contests the institute will stage a three-act play, "Deacon Dubbs."

Probably a Vice President Gag

Will Rogers, noted humorist, joins Vice President and Mrs. Garner in laughing at his own joke in a chummy get-together in Washington. Back of the group may be seen Jesse Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

Walls Will Direct State Relief Work

COLUMBUS, Jan. 21.—William A. Walls, superintendent of Kent school for 19 years, today prepared to take over the job of directing Ohio's wide-flung relief activities.

Gov. Martin L. Davey announced appointment of Walls as state director Saturday night in Washington after Harry L. Hopkins, federal relief administrator, had put his O. K. on the educator who will supervise the spending of approximately $10,000,000 a month in relief funds.

Walls will succeed Frank D. Henderson.

The 700,000 one-cent stamps have a value of $7,000 and the 300,000 two-cent stamps represent $3,000. The 250,000 three-cent stamps are valued at $7,500 and the 70,000 six-cent stamps at $4,200. The 50,000 nine-cent stamps have a value of $4,500 while the 40,000 12-cent stamps will gross $4,800. The 20,000 15-cent stamps represent $3,000 tax and the 4,000 30-cent stamps are valued at $1,200.

Only 2,000 60-cent stamps have been received, representing a valuation of $1,200 and the 2,000 150 stamps are valued at $3,000. Six hundred stamps representing a tax of $3 have been received, and this value is placed at $1,800, the whole amount being charged to the records of this county.

The new sales stamps have been "broken down" into packages of 100 stamps each.

Sale of these stamps at the treasurer's office has added additional work to the clerical force.

Sale of vendors licenses continue at the office of County Auditor John H. Irwin, these costing $1 each.

MILLER CHOSEN TO PROBE FEES

Asked by Davey to Head Bank Liquidation Investigation

CLEVELAND, Jan. 21.—Former Mayor Ray T. Miller today was asked by Gov. Martin L. Davey to take charge of an investigation into alleged excessive attorneys' fees paid in connection with liquidation of closed banks and building and loan companies.

The governor's request was contained in a telegram sent by Davey from Washington last night.

"Could you take charge of a state investigation of alleged excessive attorney fees in connection with closed banks and building and loans?" the telegram said. "Also any other pertinent matters like favoritism and alleged rackets? You would have full state cooperation and ample leeway to do a complete and searching job."

The governor said he expects Miller to accept his request.

"If he does," said Davey, "I will ask the state senate to make Miller its special agent for the purpose of conducting such an inquiry with full power to summon witnesses and subpoena records and documents."

Miller then would assume a status similar to that occupied by Frazier Reams of Toledo who has been appointed by Davey to investigate paroles and pardons of prisoners from the Ohio penitentiary.

In connection with his appointment of Miller, Gov. Davey said he had personal knowledge of alleged abuses in connection with attorneys' fees, particularly in the Cleveland and Toledo areas.

Pope Confers Honor On Ohio Catholics

CLEVELAND, Jan. 21.—Five Ohioans yesterday were honored by Pope Pius XI for outstanding service to the Roman Catholic church.

The Most Rev. Joseph Schrembs, bishop of the Cleveland Catholic diocese, conferred the honor of knight commander of the Order of St. Gregory the Great on Michael P. Mooney and James D. Cantillon of Cleveland, and Charles B. Cushman, Youngstown.

Two women, Mrs. John A. Conkey, Cleveland, and Mrs. C. M. Walsh of Cuyahoga Falls were awarded the medal "pro ecclesia et pontifice," (for church and pontiff).

4,000 County Relief Records Classified

LISBON, Jan. 21.—A complete works division occupational classification record of over 4,000 people in this county on relief has been filed at Columbus, the record having been completed here Saturday.

The new individual record was compiled from card records of those who were on direct relief and also those who were listed in the works division files. Under this new set-up, the new card gives the complete history of every one in the county on either direct relief or in works division files, and by glancing at one card, in the past, several cards had to be reviewed before the composite record was obtainable.

KARPIS, BREMER KIDNAPING GANG LEADER, HUNTED

'Public Enemy Number 1' Clears Path With Lead, Flees

FELLOW GUNMAN ALSO IS SOUGHT

Police Believe Pair Has Been Bottled Up in Atlantic City

BY JOHN W. LEAR.
(Copyright, 1935, By The Associated Press.)

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Jan. 21.—The nation's "public enemy No. 1" and a fellow gunman from the Midwest were hunted from Massachusetts to Maryland today, but police were confident they had bottled in this island resort the two desperadoes who machine-gunned their way past a raiding squad.

Alvin Karpis, wanted as co-leader of the Bremer kidnaping gang and currently No. 1 on the government's list of wanted men, cleared a path with lead when police sought to arrest him yesterday for the theft of an automobile.

With him went Harry Campbell, who clad only in underwear, stole another car and drove off as Karpis fired a final blast from the tommygun.

The police learned their identities from two women companions seized in the raid on a little hotel. The women were listed as Dolores Delaney, 21, and Winona Burdette, 22, also known as Mrs. Louise Campbell.

Woman Shot In Leg

Shot in the leg but not seriously wounded, the Delaney woman was treated at a hospital where she already had registered in anticipation of childbirth. A detective's cheek was gashed by a slug from the sub-machine gun.

Department of justice agents, their roundup of the reputed Bremer band complete except for Karpis, poured into Atlantic City.

PROBE OF OHIO PEN UNDER WAY

Wholesale Pardons Given by White Also May Be Investigated

COLUMBUS, Jan. 21.—The Ohio penitentiary, one of the largest prisons in the country and famous for a fire in which 320 convicts perished on Easter Monday, 1930, today became the subject of another investigation.

Warden Preston E. Thomas, who has weathered at least seven inquiries in his 20 years at the prison, will be among the first witnesses summoned, Frazier Reams, head of the investigation, said.

Reams, prosecuting attorney of Lucas county, who was appointed to the job of inquisitor by Gov. Martin L. Davey, this morning marched his staff of assistants and hoped to begin taking testimony in the afternoon.

He will give special attention in the inquiry into alleged favoritism, he said, to treatment accorded Thomas (Yonnie) Licavoli, Toledo gang leader, who was sentenced to life imprisonment for murder.

Warden Thomas has denied Licavoli received undue favoritism and has offered to help any way he can in the investigation.

The more than 800 commutations granted by former Gov. White also may be looked into. Reams said, and perhaps activities of the state parole board.

Morton Neipp, young Toledo attorney, and Charles Leasure, former Muskingum county prosecutor, will be Reams' chief assistants.

All Vendors to Get Sales Tax Discount

COLUMBUS, Jan. 19.—The state tax commission today rescinded its order forbidding merchants purchasing prepaid sales tax stamps in lots of less than $24 from participating in the 3 per cent discount. The action was taken after Attorney General John W. Bricker held that all vendors, no matter in what amount they purchase the stamps, must be given the discount.

Reading, 41, teacher of English in Libby High school, who was found shot to death in the basement of his home yesterday. He was a teacher in Toledo schools for more than 10 years, and was a graduate of Ohio Wesleyan and Harvard universities.

MOONEY LOSES LATEST APPEAL

Supreme Court Refuses to Review Case; Pardon Only Hope

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—Thomas J. Mooney must remain in San Quentin penitentiary.

His latest effort to escape serving the remainder of his life for complicity in the 1916 San Francisco Preparedness Day parade bombing failed today when the supreme court refused to review the case.

The 51-year-old convict, who has waged an 18-year campaign for freedom, asked this court to permit him to file habeas corpus proceedings, thus compelling California to defend its action in keeping him imprisoned.

In asking a review, Mooney contended he had been sent to prison on perjured evidence following the death of 10 persons and the injury of 44 in the bombing.

U. S. Webb, state attorney general, asserted that under present laws California could not reopen the case and that Mooney's only avenue of relief was through an amendment of the laws by the legislature or a pardon by the governor.

Four governors have refused to pardon Mooney. The present executive, Frank E. Merriam, has had the case before him awaiting the supreme court ruling.

County Given $6,565 For Relief Program

COLUMBUS, Jan. 21.—The state relief commission today threw a $10,396 work relief project into Ohio's fight against traffic accidents.

The project provides for guard posts at points considered dangerous along highways in Washington and Monroe townships, in Richland county. It would employ 32 workers.

Other projects approved include, by counties:

Athens—$3,171 for relief administration at Athens.

Columbiana—$6,565 for Lisbon relief administration.

Gallia—$5,425 to construct concrete sidewalks at Gallipolis.

Hocking—$974 to move equipment and improve East End and Senior high school buildings at Logan.

Knox—$857 to paint interior of Second ward school building at Mt. Vernon.

Portage—$2,936 for sidewalk construction in Bremenfield Center, Blenheim.

"AH YES, CONGRESS"

Ask a man on the street what he thinks of the new congress and he is likely to cover up his void of information something like this, "Ah yes, congress, to be sure. It's in session, I believe. Wasn't it congress the President was talking to about social security?"

It was. Congress is in session. The man on the street, however, has a good excuse to be somewhat hazy about what is going on. The fact is, nothing is going on, not visibly. Some say congressmen are sitting and thinking about the things they are going to do. Others believe congressmen are just sitting. The point is indeterminate.

The Congressional Record sheds only a sickly light on the matter. The Record has been a thin and hungry looking publication so far this year, with one or two exceptions. One of the few corpulent issues bears the date, Jan. 17, the day on which President Roosevelt gave congress the problem of social security to ponder. The report on the subject, together with Sen. Wagner's bill, a geyser of erudition by Huey Long and a long debate on the sugar tariff, made The Record on that day almost a shadow of its former self.

Probably two things are making Washington unseasonably inconspicuous right now. First is the Hauptmann trial. Senators and representatives, being men of $10,000 a year caliber, are too smart to waste any of their sweetness on desert air. In other words, they can't compete with the trial from a publicity standpoint. Those who may have stirring things to say probably are waiting until the public has time to be stirred.

The other factor is congressional apathy is the nature of congress itself. Containing many new members, it is still in that state of respectable disorder which characterizes groups of intelligent beings trying to learn the ropes in a new environment. A chronic shouter like Huey Long naturally isn't bothered by such things. But there is only one Huey—only one in full bloom, that is. One Washington observer, probably trying to frighten his countrymen for the fun of it, says there are numerous Huey Longs budding in the capital. Silence now, in short, is the full before the storm.

WEEK OF PREPARATION

This is Ohio's last week of preparation for its new sales tax, which becomes effective next Monday. The bulk of the work has been done, but an infinite number of details remain to be cared for by tens of thousands of retail merchants.

The sales tax will be an added burden on their facilities, and many of them will resent it for this reason. It is not within their immediate power, however, to change the tax law. Their job is to do the best they can with the law as it stands.

The alternative to the kind of sales tax Ohio has adopted is the form most other sales tax states are using. Under this form an even heavier burden is thrust upon merchants with reference to collection. Ohio's experimental plan, the result of much careful planning by experts aware of the merchants' problems, is being watched closely by states which have or are considering sales taxes.

Consumers should remember as the sales tax becomes effective that the merchant's role of tax collector in an involuntary one. Ohio retailers opposed the sales tax bitterly until it was unavoidable as the only means of financing government. Thereupon, their representatives diverted their efforts to getting what they believed was the fairest type of retail sales tax. They succeeded.

The prospect of paying this tax is no more unwelcome to consumers than the prospect of collecting it is to merchants. Each group owes to the other the consideration which fellow-sufferers usually show. The state is trying to make the best of a bad situation. Merchants and consumers, as citizens of the state, are equally affected by the crisis which makes a sales tax necessary. Merchants will complete their preparations for collecting the tax this week. Insofar as possible, consumers should be making mental preparations to pay it.

THE STARS SAY

For Tuesday, January 22

The astrological promises for this day may be read as favoring quick and unforeseen changes of a somewhat radical nature, bringing one into strange places with new interests and contacts. Properly engineered there is great hope for progress and ultimate prosperity. But there may be stubborn obstacles, delays, disappointments and even personal depressions to overcome before victory may be won.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is are on the threshold of a year of progress, achievement and prosperity if they firmly suppress tendencies to depression and discouragement.

A child born on this day may have some unique or novel talents, with possibly scientific or inventive ability, which may take it far afield and perhaps into the public eye. It should fight its depressive tendencies.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

ORANGE BLOSSOM SPECIAL, Jan. 21—We are skimming through Virginia, the Carolinas and Georgia toward Florida, sunshine and waving palms. Slipping, so to speak, out of the raccoon benny into shorts. And until beach crowds have had a peek at me in shorts, they've never been properly convulsed. I've convulsed both Rivers, Ostend, Atlantic City and Santa Monica. My last visit to the Everglades was at the boom's peak, when the price of a hotel room for the night sounded like a phone number. For a winter, I lived in a sort of crystallized tent on a tag end of Miami Beach.

A year later you could buy that house and lot for half the season's rent and likely get a Shetland to boot. Gene Tunney in snowy plus fours would accept his challenge. That year I met Ed Howe, a journalistic idol, and formed an enduring friendship.

Many figures of that irresponsibly gay winter I saw daily have gone to a better world—Will Hogg, Kin Hubbard, John McE Bowman, Joe Schenck, Wilson Mizner and Flo Ziegfeld. And Florida, hurricane struck and economically blighted, has passed the corona of eclipse to shine effulgently again.

The panorama from a train window is an unending ripple of contrasts. A stark tree against a lonely sky. Gray holes velveteed with dead moss. The sudden sprout of a town. A bright red barn with a liver pill ad. Burninating cows in disdainful gaze and a scampering colt. The swamp glow from a hobo camp. Overhead a darting mail plane. Rolling farms. A lazy stream and a chuckling waterfall. All Nature, indeed, in a quick throw of the dice.

My train reading is always somehow nixed in between issues of periodicals I enjoy. So at terminal newsstands I squander for outlandish literature—catholic brochures, blood and thunderers and love confessions. Stuff one rarely reads elsewhere. In the club car was a kindred soul, a tittup James M. Barrie sort. With no show of shame, he was devouring the curlier: "I Was Condemned to The Chair." Incidentally, nowhere save on trains am I assailed by a satisfied hunger for tea and slices of that old fashioned yellow pound cake.

To travel, the syndicate scribbler must prepare even more than the usual extra copy in advance, a torturing addition to the daily grind. Yet the only way to bridge the gap. I did my dot and before entraining, phoned the syndicators to confirm arrival. It had not arrived. Nor did it next mail, or next, so I went to the train in a full blown set of the jitters. It meant I must turn out a week's work before sundown. Three hours later at Wilmington, Delaware, a messenger handed in a telegram. It read: "Copy arrived O. K." I have stubbornly refused since I launched this quixotic columning adventure to make carbons. This was my narrowest squeak. Yet it did not make me carbon conscious. But they'll get me some day, podner!

There are few rosier scenes for reflection than the vista from a train as day slips slowly away to dusk. Something friendly about the queer world that roll up suddenly out of nowhere. Arabesques that would be vaguely terrifying save from security of a brightly lit coach. They are the stuff of dreams, beauty, shadowy terror and tranquility. Scattered lights of an approaching city begin to twinkle and the curlicues of darkness tremble away. We are thundering into Richmond in Virginia. Romantic, chivalrous Richmond! I think of hoop-skirts, swirling capes and eyes behind a fan. Also—materialist that I am—fried chicken, cream gravy, turnip greens, black-eyed peas and corn pone. And the train wheels continue to yap: "Heinie Manush to play today."

A diner with swaying waiters plunging through night is always what Cole Porter calls a pulse-upper. Fellow diners flicker romantically like characters of a cinema. There is the distinguished gentleman, with an empty sleeve, across the aisle. He carries a combination knife and fork in pig skin case. Propped against his water carafe is a biography: "Dumas, the Incredible Marquis." He smacks of D'Artagnan himself. He has that don't-speak-to-me aloofness of the seasoned traveler. I have never acquired it. The minute I take a seat in the Pullman smoker, some mugg selling silos out of Omaha or something, begins telling me that one, ha, ha, about the goat that wandered into the old maid's room. And before you know it he's calling me "Mac" and dragging out kodak snapshots of the wife and kiddies.

HEALTH

By Dr. Royal S. Copeland
New York City

Importance of Exercise to Health

Much has been written about the failure of elimination, its treatment and prevention. In spite of this it is the most common complaint of civilized life. The need for salts and purges was unknown to the ancients. They consumed ruminant and coarse foods which promoted elimination.

Lack of exercise, the high pressure of modern living, faulty posture, improper food and lack of personal hygiene, are a few causes of trouble. They are factors that are too often overlooked. Laziness and negligence lead to a habit that is difficult to cure.

Too often children acquire this faulty habit at an early age. As they grow older they become the victims of chronic failure of elimination.

Evil of Modern Times

The general health is markedly impaired by this evil of modern times. Serious diseases, such as appendicitis, gall bladder and kidney disorders, can be traced to sluggish intestinal action.

The child or adult suffering from this trouble is handicapped. No one will deny that such an individual lacks the "pep" and energy necessary for modern competition. They are more susceptible to infections and constitutional disturbances. Not only is there physical impairment, but there is a marked mental reaction. They are "cranky", easily irritated and difficult to please.

To victims of this disease I would first advise that they form regular habit of elimination, set aside for it a definite time each day. Occasionally a small enema may be taken. But, by all means, avoid strong and irritating cathartics.

The diet is important and for complete cure it is necessary that proper food be taken at regular hours. For vigorous adults, bran, whole wheat and rye bread may be used in place of white bread. Include in the meals an abundant supply of fresh fruits and vegetables. I cannot overemphasize the laxative action, as well as nutritive value of prunes, apricots and figs.

Take Long Walks

Meals should be taken at regular hours and under pleasant surroundings. Avoid emotional strain and undue fatigue. Chew your food slowly and carefully. Drink plenty of water during the day, between meals, but not with meals.

There is no better form of exercise for promoting elimination than walking. When walking, assume a correct posture so that the abdominal organs are held in their normal position. Hold your chin up, your stomach in and your spine straight. Walk outdoors whenever the weather permits.

Golf, tennis, horseback riding and swimming, are excellent forms of exercise that aid in the correction of trouble. Of course, these forms of exercise cannot be all ways indulged in by everybody. But long walks will improve your appetite, aid digestion and promote proper elimination.

Exercise is beneficial, but remember that rest is just as important. Do not over-exercise and bear in mind that exercise which over-fatigues is harmful.

"THE LADY DANCES" by MARGE STANLEY

CHAPTER I

Aftermath

"Just the same," said John Talbot to his brother with a gesture of finality, as they stood at the San Francisco docks. "You're a fool, Mark. You've got everything to hold you back in Spring Brook—everything that the average person wants."

"Everything!" Mark snapped. "Everything means a respectable roof and three meals a day, I suppose. A chance to rot in an office, and a chance to marry a Connecticut belle, Spring Brook and the law business. Bah!"

"Do you think I flew clear across the country," queried John sarcastically, "just to hear you repeat your objections to sane living?"

Mark Talbot looked at his brother with that sullen expression which had become habitual of late. It was as if he had some means of erecting a frowning psychic wall between them.

"You're a queer duck!" said John, staring at his brother's profile against the glowing western sky. A real Talbot, he thought—so like himself in appearance, but so young, so independent, so restless. He hadn't really understood Mark since the War, something had severed them. John sighed, and tried again. "I don't mean just that, Mark," he said. "I mean, you should consider the family—Mother and sister, and, for that matter, myself. Not money, or material things, but—well, domestic security, and the Talbot tradition—"

"Mean smugness and dry just interrupted Mark sharply. "Because you're married, and harassed, you want to see me in the same predicament?" John winced, and Mark was instantly contrite.

"I'm sorry, John. You know I think Marie's a peach, and it's not her fault, her father is so puritanical. Only—not for me!"

"Well," said John. "I think you're foolish. The War's over. You had your fling at adventure, and did well enough. Now forget it and settle down."

"The War's not over for me. After a taste of real living and real thrills—Oh, pshaw! I can't explain it to you, John. You weren't there."

Again John's face darkened. "That wasn't my fault, you know—I tried—before you did."

"No it wasn't your fault, they turned you down, of course. But you weren't there, and you don't realize quite what it did to a person. After flames and racket and death—to come back to the lift of an office in the family law mill, to substitute legal arguments with crooked opponents for battle, and the problems of the law court for a life-or-death struggle—"

Mark paused and turned to face John again.

"It's no use trying, John. I've tried it for three years now, and I can't stand it!"

"But we let you go once—"

"Listen to me, John!" interrupted Mark. "I guess I'm an anachronism."

Either that, or a born black sheep, I suppose I was intended to be a soldier of fortune or an adventurer, but I happened to be born into a world where adventure, except for overly-expensive war, is at a discount. And here's the point: You know as well as I do that another year in Spring Brook would end in some sort of scandal. Isn't it better for me to travel, to get far enough away so my black sheep propensities won't bother the family?"

John shrugged.

"There's no law requiring you to get into trouble," he said.

"There is, though," replied Mark. "and it happens to be a law of nature. When you bottle up steam, it piles up pressure for a while, and then—bang! But if you let it escape, there's no explosion at all, just a pleasant sizzling. What I'm trying to do is find myself a safety valve and so far the only thing I can see that offers any promise of success is travel—and travel to some of the less civilized regions of the world. I'm sick of the drabness and restrictions of civilization."

"Well," said John slowly. "I don't seem to be able to impress my point of view on you. Of course, you're old enough to know your own mind, but I should think your mother's wishes would have some small influence with you."

"Mother would be all right if you let her alone," said Mark. "She's quite capable of understanding my feelings. And that, John, is something more than I can say for you."

"It is? Well, I understood you well enough to see the uselessness of this wild goose chase across the continent for the purpose of a last minute argument with you! It was because of your mother that I'm here at all!"

"Yeah," said Mark dryly. "I can hear the family argument, and especially your part." He assumed a nasal pompous tone. "Leave him to me, mother. I'll talk to him; it'll be all right!"

John flushed.

"I'm through arguing with you, Mark," he said. "I've given you the family's wishes, and I've given you my own viewpoint. If neither sentiment nor reason has any weight with you, I don't see what else I can do about it. Your money's your own, and so is your interest in the practice. Now go ahead and get yourself into trouble!"

"I've been around," answered Mark with a grin. "Any trouble I get into won't bounce back on the family."

"It had better not!" said John darkly.

The two brothers fell silent for a moment both eyeing the colossal bulk of the steamship Orient, so massive that it towered beside the dock without perceptible motion from the oily swells of the Bay. The sun was dropping lower across the Pacific; sailing time was approaching, and the two turned scarcely-seeing glances on the crowd and bustle that marked departure, which had flowed around them for the past half-hour.

A trickling stream of last minute arrivals moved past them toward the gang-plank. Business men, tourists, vacationers—Mark eyed them indifferently; they were the representatives of the world from which he was fleeing, the security, the routine, the smugness which was all he could see in America. John paid them even less attention; deep in a reverie, he hardly saw them at all.

A portly old gentleman puffed by, followed at a little distance by a slender girl in a severely dark dress, accompanied by some port official or other. Mark shifted his eyes casually to her face, and suffered a sudden awakening from his cogitations. He glimpsed a small, ruby-lipped mouth, a tiny up-tilted nose, and a pair of very dark eyes, all framed by a semi-circle of blue-black hair beneath her hat. But the lips were set in a straight, sullen line, and the dark eyes, for the instant they met Mark's, gazed into his with a stare of cold enmity.

She withdrew her glance, and passed the two with her eyes sternly ahead, and a sort of grim resignation in her attitude.

"Whew!" said Mark, turning to gaze after her as she and her companion mounted the gang-plank. "Pretty! Darn pretty! But I wonder what she thinks I ever did to her?"

"Eh?" said John, startled out of his mood of thought. He turned to follow Mark's gaze, and a quizzical smile of despair spread over his features.

"Mark, you're hopeless!" he exclaimed. "I give up! I'm through arguing! Once and for all, are you going?"

"I'm going!" said Mark decisively.

"Right!" said John. "Then, if it's settled, I want you to know that our best wishes, and the family's love, go with you. I want you to know that."

He paused, shifting a little, as if fumbling for words. Thoughts did not flow so easily into words for the quiet John as for the fluent, irrepressible Mark.

"And one other thing," he continued, awkwardly. "Don't be so cocksure that I'm just a dried-up old fogey, without the insight to understand your viewpoint. After all, once I was just as young as you are, and I haven't entirely forgotten how it feels to be young—no one ever does."

He paused again.

"What I'm trying to say, kid, is with sub-machine guns and tear gas bombs.

New York and Philadelphia police guarded bridges and ferries leading into those metropolises. State troopers patrolled the intervening highways.

The gun fight began with startling suddenness before dawn yesterday.

Atlantic City police had received a request from Florida to be on the lookout for a stolen car, the occupants of which were known to have a shotgun and automatic pistol. Patrolman Elias Saab spied the machine in a garage near the boardwalk.

The men who left it there were traced to the adjacent Dun-Mor hotel, on Kentucky avenue, and a squad of detectives and police set out to arrest them.

Officers were stationed at front and rear entrances of the building, another stood in the lobby and two went to the fourth floor room where Karpis and Campbell were quartered. The women were asleep in an adjoining room.

Smash In Door

Smashing in the door, Detective Dan Mulhern stepped into the opening with pistol in hand.

"Stick 'em up," he commanded.

"We're officers," replied Karpis, who was fully dressed and holding the sub-machine gun.

Firing as he turned, the bandit sent a burst of slugs at the doorway as Mulhern ducked. The two detectives tried to halt the outlaws' flight from a corner in the hallway, but their revolvers were no match for Karpis' weapon.

Karpis fired a volley through the door of the women's room to awaken them. Police said it was one of these shots which struck his companion.

Fashion Trends for Spring

Here Are Three Models in Wool Which Herald the Mode for the Coming Season

By MARIE MAROT

IT WON'T be long now. Now that the holiday season is a thing of the past, our thoughts veer in the direction of clothes for early spring wear. No matter how luxurious the fur coat, or how smart the winter frocks, we want to wear a new suit in a light shade. Here are three models to help us think of spring. The first shows something of the new silhouette. The fabric is powder blue wool with stitched details on hood and hem. Nice with gray accessories. The cape costume will be very important. The wrap-around coat has a one-piece yoke and sleeves and is in snuff-yellow spongy wool with an amber knob for a button. The chic tailleur has a skirt of checked black and white fuzzy wool with revers of the same on a double-breasted jacket of smooth oxford gray woolen.

McSpaden Moves Into Golf Lead Of $2,500 Open

(By Associated Press)
BACHMAN, Jan. 21.—By the margin of a stroke picked up in a round of golf featured by a flock of birds, Harold McSpaden moved ahead of the field today into the lead of the $2,500 Sacramento Open tournament.
The 29-year-old Kansas City, Mo., professional, who had an average 73 one over par, in the first 16 holes of play, took the municipal links apart Sunday with a record-breaking 67, aided by six birds.
Closely pressing him were two other known professionals, Jim Fogarty, Kirkwood, Mo., and Jim Demaret, Galveston, Tex.
Fogarty, in a round almost as spectacular as McSpaden's added a 69 to a 73 for a 36-hole score of 141, while Demaret, after collecting a par 72 on Saturday, streaked around the 6,787-yard course in 69.
Two iron shots laid dead to the pin and four putts ranging from 10 to 25 feet, gave McSpaden his brilliant score.
